

1 Executive Summary

The dedicated training website has been technically realised and is accessible through the public ETSF web portal <http://www.etsf.eu/> by following links in the main menu to Services and then to Training. As a single gateway to all ETSF training material, this platform comprises a section for on-line training modules, which are at the centre of this deliverable, but also an archive of tested lectures and material from hands-on schools identified as part of the earlier deliverable D6.1. The implementation of the on-line training modules follows an agreed concept that recognises the widely different aims and backgrounds of ETSF users by structuring the contents at introductory, tutorial and reference levels with embedded interactive elements and exercises. A first module about "Electrons and Nuclei" has already been published and illustrates the concept. Further modules are currently being written, while internal and external evaluations take place in order to optimise the concept and the benefit for users already during the creation of the training platform.